“ Everything I see. Everything I do. It always comes back to you, Dad. From teaching me how to pour concrete to teaching me how to grow and maintain a beautiful garden... I think fondly on all the days spent together at your house eating fish and soup, which I still crave, from grandma and Aunt Virginia. Some of my favorite memories are going up to the farm (even though we had to cut the grass) and all of our times hunting and fishing together. You taught me to enjoy and respect nature - both the land and the animals. All these things you gave to me from your heart, and because of that, I have always tried to pass those same things on to my own children. Thank you for being my dad and for always loving me.

All my love and respect,
Your Son Albert

“ You are my grandfather, but more like my father. You raised me like you did your children. It was you that showed me how to ride my bike and how to swing on our swing set. You taught me about different animals. We had so many talks about different things. I remember watching Zorro on Wednesday nights. You showed me hard work and dedication. I never seen you leave for work because you was always gone long before we woke up but I remember you coming home and me running into your arms telling you all about my day. And I never heard any things about yours. You left work at work and always gave all of us your attention. Always fixing things and working in the yard. I hurt so bad because I lost a grandfather and father at the same time, but I also know your work here was done and you are now forever resting in eternity. I love you so much daddy your my angel watching over now.
